

WBB Named 2009 Greater Washington Contractor of the Year

November 04, 2009

Whitney, Bradley & Brown, Inc.

Whitney, Bradley & Brown, Inc. was named 2009 Greater Washington Contractor of the Year in the $75-300 million annual revenue category. The award, given annually by the Professional Services Council, the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, and Washington Technology magazine, recognizes firms for their innovation, dedication, and commitment during the past year in the region's government contracting community.

Bill McMullen, President and CEO of WBB, accepted the award on behalf of the firm at the November 4 awards gala held in Tysons Corner, Virginia. "The U.S. federal government is our largest and most important client, so being recognized by your peers as 'Contractor of the Year' is a most special honor," said McMullen. "The recognition really goes to the employees of WBB who do the important work for our many government clients and I salute each of them for their contribution."

Other contractor of the year winners include Dovel Technologies in the less than $25 million annual revenue category, High Performance Technologies in the $25 to $75 million annual revenue category, and CACI in the greater than $300 million annual revenue category.
