Dear U.S.-Africa Private Sector Health Forum Participant:

Welcome to Washington, D.C., and the 2008 Corporate Council on Africa U.S. - Africa Private Sector Health Forum.

This forum brings together leading members from the African and American business communities, African and American public officials, and representatives from international financial institutions to provide you with essential information on private sector investments in health care for Africa. As our inaugural effort, the Forum offers attendees a broad and informative program covering the spectrum of current and future health care investments on the continent.

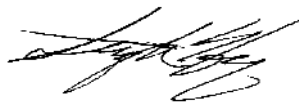

The 2008 U.S. – Africa Private Sector Health Forum will highlight opportunities in private sector health care delivery in Africa, including medical franchising models, pharmaceutical manufacturing, distribution and retail sales, medical technology solutions, pharmacology and biotechnology applications, health care infrastructure and facilities development, access to leveraged partnerships and innovative financing mechanisms, health insurance and risk pooling models, human capacity development and leading examples of social entrepreneurship.

On behalf of the Corporate Council on Africa and our Board of Directors, the U.S. - Africa Private Sector Health Forum Planning Committee and our entire staff, we would like to express our gratitude to all of the corporations, business enterprises, public officials, CCA members, meeting participants, and sponsors of the 2008 Forum. Your support underscores the growing importance of private sector investments in African health care.

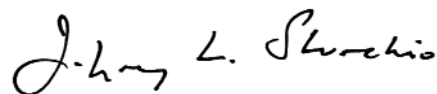

We trust that you will engage your peers and partners while you are in Washington, D.C. and that these discussions will continue beyond this forum and into the upcoming 2009 U.S. – Africa Business Summit next September.

Thank you for your continuing support of the Corporate Council on Africa. Our hope is that you find the 2008 U.S.-Africa Private Sector Health Forum a valuable experience and we look forward to your active involvement over the next two days.

Sincerely,

Stephen Hayes

AFRICAN PRIVATE HEALTH CARE: A GROWING INVESTMENT SECTOR

DESCRIPTION

Though varying by size and by country, the private health sector in Sub-Saharan Africa is surprisingly large and constitutes an important, diverse component of the region's health care systems. Governments are increasingly recognizing the private sector as a partner in the search for better health outcomes while donors and entrepreneurs are responding to the overwhelming demand with appropriate innovations. The session panelists will highlight various investment opportunities and profile the private sector health investment market in Africa today.

SPEAKERS

- H.E. Bience P. Gawanas, Commissioner for Social Affairs, African Union (invited)
- Dr. Jeffrey Sturchio, Chairman, The Corporate Council on

Africa, Vice President of Corporate Responsibility,
Merck & Co., Inc. and President, the Merck Foundation

WORKSHOPS

WORKSHOP I

INNOVATIVE SOLUTIONS TO THE HEALTH WORKER SHORTAGE
ASHLAWN

DESCRIPTION

The challenges in Africa's health infrastructure and human capacity development are well documented. According to the recent Global Health Workforce Alliance report, "Scaling Up, Saving Lives," the number of health workers currently being trained falls far below what is needed to meet international health goals. This session will discuss innovative private sector efforts to address this issue.

SPEAKERS

- Elaine C. Mackenzie, President and CEO, Health Careers of America
- Ummoro Adano, Senior HR Management Systems Advisor, The Capacity Project (MSH), Capacity Kenya Point Person
- Conrad Person, Director of International Programs and Product Giving, Johnson & Johnson

- Adv. Kurt Worrall-Clare, CEO, Hospital Association of South Africa

MODERATOR

- Michelle DeMoor, Senior Director of International Policy, Philips Electronics

WORKSHOP IIIPHARMACEUTICAL MANUFACTURING IN AFRICAMADISONDESCRIPTION

African manufacturers supplied twenty to thirty percent of pharmaceuticals for the estimated $3.8 billion sub-Saharan pharmaceutical market in 2006. More than seventy percent of that production originated from South Africa. Increasingly, many other African countries are actively pursuing local production capacity. The workshop will discuss the established African pharmaceutical manufacturing industry as well as highlight emerging markets including potential south-south partnerships across Africa.

SPEAKERS

- Patrizia Carlevaro, Head of the International Aid Unit, Eli Lilly and Company
- Stavros Nicolaou, COO, Aspen Pharmacare Holdings, Limited

TOM HASLETT

CEO
SEVEN SEAS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, LLC

Tom Haslett, CFA, has spent his career managing equity investments for institutions and implementing social development programs in Africa. Tom's investment focus has included large developed markets and frontier markets in Asia, Africa, and Latin America. In 1992, Tom was part of the start-up team in San Francisco, CA that launched the Montgomery Emerging Markets and he went on to Putnam Investments in Boston, MA to build and lead the Emerging Markets team there in 1996. For ten years, as a Chief Investment Officer, Tom created and managed successful investment teams and investment strategies for institutional accounts across multiple geographies, industry sectors, and market capitalizations - consistently out-performing market benchmarks. In 2002, Tom left the investment management industry to apply himself to social development in Africa. He led a team to build a youth service program (engaging 18 - 25 year old South African men and women to serve in the state-run schools of Guateng Province) in Johannesburg, South Africa. After two years, City Year South Africa was launched, and Tom shifted his focus to the developmental challenges of sub-Saharan African children who were orphaned and made vulnerable by the AIDS virus. He co-founded an organization called the Bantwana Initiative that today is supporting vulnerable children in Uganda, Swaziland, South Africa, and most recently in Zimbabwe. Tom's shared passions for investing and for African social development led him to form a partnership with Heather Sherwin, Anne Stetson, and Paul Miot. Tom and Heather, who is based in South Africa, first met in September of 2005. During the last three years, together with Anne and Paul, they have collaborated to develop the Africa Healthcare Fund. The team has forged a cohesive investment strategy that delivers both commercial and social returns to investors and enables institutions and individuals to achieve these goals concurrently.

DR. HANNAH E. KETTLER

SENIOR PROGRAM OFFICER, GLOBAL HEALTH POLICY AND FINANCE
BILL AND MELINDA GATES FOUNDATION

Hannah is an economist and senior program officer on the Global Health Policy and Finance team at the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. She is responsible for a portfolio of grants and projects that aim to secure adequate financing and a supportive policy environment for global health product innovation and introduction. Given the important role that for-profit companies in both the north and south play in product development, much of her work is focused on reducing risks, and designing of financial incentives and business models to encourage greater private sector company engagement. Prior to joining the Gates Foundation in March 2003, Hannah led a two year Rockefeller Foundation funded project titled "Biotechnology and Global Health" at the Institute for Global Health at the University of California San Francisco. The recommendations and evidence base created in this project motivated BIO and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation to establish BioVentures for Global Health in 2004. Between 1998 and 2001 Hannah worked as the Senior Industrial Economist for the Office of Health Economics (OHE) in London. The OHE is housed within the Association for British Pharmaceutical Industry and conducts research and consultancy. Hannah's work focused on the economics of innovation in the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries, including analyses of merger and alliance strategies and cross country comparisons of the performance of biopharmaceutical industries. Hannah has a PhD in Industrial Economics from the University of Notre Dame. Her dissertation is titled: "Transitions to Competitiveness: Problems of Economic Restructuring in East Germany".

ELAINE MACKENZIE

PRESIDENT AND CEO
HEALTH CAREERS OF AMERICA, INC.

Elaine MacKenzie is an entrepreneur and founder of Health Careers of America, Inc., a U.S. based global training and job placement corporation for the health care industry. As President and CEO she has developed of a series of international training programs for emerging and developed countries. In her forty year career, she has both for-profit and non-profit business background with disciplines in business start-ups and management; human resources; instructional design, training and development; finance, mergers and acquisitions; and global marketing, exports and distribution. Her industries are in health; education; real estate and construction; and agriculture. As a farm girl from Texas, she learned the basics of rural life and how to blend this infrastructure with urban and suburban communities. In developing countries, this has given her a distinct advantage in understanding the challenges facing communities, but particularly those most in need in Africa. As a former student of nursing, Ms. MacKenzie designed a retention and replenishment program for health workers that address the complexities of life in developing countries. This private enterprise model uses education, “culturalization” and export of health workers to stimulate replenishment and improvement of health systems in Africa, Asia, and Caribbean countries. This model uses private monies to produce high quality workers and solve the health worker shortages worldwide. Her model is being developed and implemented in Uganda and the Philippines.

DR. ERNEST CHIJOKE MADU

FOUNDER

HEART INSTITUTE OF WEST AFRICA

Dr Ernest Madu is the Founder of the Heart Institute of the Caribbean and serves as the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer for the center. He is responsible for day-to-day operations, global vision, and strategic relationships. Dr. Madu served on the Faculty of Medicine in the Division of Cardiology at Vanderbilt University. He is an expert in non-invasive cardiovascular diagnostics, with broad training and experience in all areas of cardiovascular diagnosis. Dr Madu is an internationally renowned cardiologist and is well respected in the international cardiology community. He has published extensively in well respected medical journals including such journals as Nature Medicine, New England Journal of Medicine, Clinical Cardiology, Circulation, Journal of the American College of Cardiology, Journal of the American Society of Echocardiography and Hypertension. Dr. Ernest Chijioke Madu believes that people in the developing world have a right to world-class health care. At his three Heart Institute of the Caribbean clinics, in Kingston and Mandeville, Jamaica, and in the Cayman Islands, he delivers more than $1 million a year in free or reduced-care treatment, a significant contribution in an area where 56% of hospital deaths are caused by cardiovascular disease. Now Dr. Madu is hoping to transfer HIC's mission and achievements into other low-resource nations. His next target is Nigeria, his home country, where the Heart Institute of West Africa is scheduled to open in 2009. Though AIDS and malaria are huge factors for Africa, Dr. Madu emphasizes the importance of treating cardiovascular disease, which is the second leading cause of death in sub-Saharan Africa, after HIV/AIDS, and the leading cause of death for people over 30. Dr. Madu combines clinical experience, technological advances and an entrepreneurial spirit to fulfill his mission to ensure high quality care is available for all.

DR. DEBREWOK ZEWIDIE

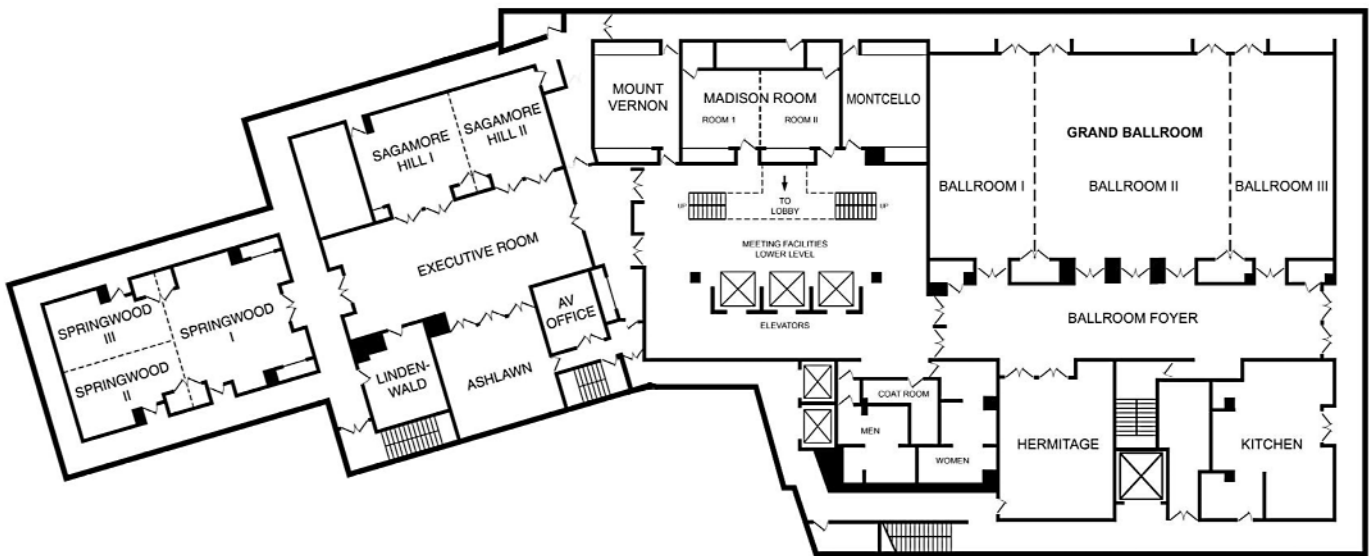

DIRECTOR, GLOBAL HIV/AIDS PROGRAM
THE WORLD BANK

Dr. Debrework Zewdie has spent the last 20 years fighting HIV/AIDS as a scientist, strategist, manager, advocate and activist. Her dedication and leadership have helped transform the response to the epidemic at the international, regional, national and community levels. She has been a supportive partner with UNAIDS since its inception, working closely with the Executive Director to expand political and financial commitment to HIV prevention, care and treatment around the world. Dr. Zewdie is currently Director of the World Bank's Global HIV/AIDS Program, where she provides overall strategic and technical leadership to the Bank's AIDS efforts. She serves as the Bank's UNAIDS Global Coordinator and represents the institution as a member of the UNAIDS Program Coordinating Board, contributing to the development and implementation of global HIV policies and strategies. Under her stewardship, the Bank's AIDS portfolio has expanded dramatically. She created and led the AIDS Campaign Team for Africa (ACTAfrica), which developed the strategy for Intensifying Action against HIV/AIDS in Africa. This groundbreaking strategy resulted in the Multi-country AIDS Program for Africa, which committed US$1 billion to support AIDS programs in 35 countries, at a time when international funding to combat the epidemic was tragically low. The MAP fundamentally changed the scope of the World Bank AIDS response, becoming the first multi-sectoral program to provide civil society and the private sector with direct and long-term financing to support HIV programs of national scale. Prior to joining the World Bank, Dr. Zewdie was Deputy Director of the Africa Region for the AIDS Control and Prevention project (AIDSCAP) of Family Health International, the largest global AIDS program at that time. There she worked at the regional level to strengthen program implementation in 17 African countries. In her home country of Ethiopia, Dr. Zewdie had a rich career as a researcher, Associate Professor of Immunology, and program manager on a range of public health challenges. She served as Deputy Director and Acting Director of the National Research Institute of Health, established and headed the National Referral Laboratory for AIDS in Ethiopia, and served as Program Manager of Ethiopia's AIDS/STD Prevention and Control Program. In 1985, she identified the first HIV-positive Ethiopian with a team of physicians. She continues to serve on several Boards, including the International AIDS Society. Dr. Zewdie is a founding vice president of the Society for Women and AIDS in Africa, where she brought to bear her perspectives as an African woman. In addition to UNAIDS and the World Bank, Dr. Zewdie has deep working knowledge of national AIDS programs, the Global Fund for AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, bilateral donors such as PEPFAR and DFID, and civil society organizations. In November 2007, on the request of the GFATM Executive Director, Dr. Zewdie was seconded to GFATM to lead its Operations Department, the institution's largest unit with two-thirds of total global staff. Dr. Zewdie was selected on the basis of her track record establishing and implementing AIDS programs at the international, regional and country levels. In her seven-month secondment at GFATM, Dr. Zewdie restructured the Operations Department, put needed systems in place and built teams to help the Fund achieve its mandate. Dr. Zewdie received her Ph.D. in Immunology from the University of London and was a Senior MacArthur Fellow at Harvard University's School of Population and Development Studies. She has published numerous journal articles and book chapters on a variety of public health subjects.
